Rostok University is the oldest and largest university in continental northern Europe and the Baltic Sea area, and the 8th oldest in Central Europe. Currently, with 10 faculties and students from 99 different countries, Rostok University is a famous school that raised numerous Nobel prize winners.

60 min

Kröpeliner Straße is Rostok's main pedestrian street, that begins at the historic Market square and runs east to the 14th-century Kröpeliner Tor, a former town gate. All Rostok's important buildings can be found around this street, including the University and Town Hall.

15 min

Rostock town hall was originally built in the 13th century in Brick Gothic style but extensively transformed in the 18th century, with the addition of a Baroque façade and a banqueting hall. It's one of the town's main attractions, reminding of the town's "golden" Hanseatic age.

30 min

St. Mary's Church or Marienkirche, on Ziegenmarkt, is an imposing 13th century Brick Gothic church. Inside there is a unique astronomical clock built-in 1472 by Hans Düringer.

15 min

Kröpeliner Tor is located in the east end of Kröpeliner Straße. It's one of the oldest remaining gates of Germany, dating to 1270. The observation spot on the top offers the great panorama of the city center.

Market Square

30 min

New Market Square in Rostock has preserved six original, carefully restored gable houses from the 15th and 16th centuries. The other historical houses in Hanseatic style that once bordered the square were destroyed in an Allied air-raid in 1942, and rebuilt in a simplified manner.
